From 1883 to 1902 Mr. Hawley was retirement from the State Insurance Department, it was supposed by his enemies that he was on the road to oblivion. Francis G. Landon, secretary of the Embassy at Vienna, resigned his foreign post to come home and deliver a coup degrace to Mr. Hunter by wresting away his leadership in Dutchess county. He failed in the attempt.

Like Paul Morton Mr. Hawley was used by the Government support its contention that before Mr. Harriman bought the Southern Pacific it was in active competition with the Union Pacific and that no such competition now exists.

general Mr. Hawley's testimony was along the same line as that of Mr. Morton. He testified as to the manner in which he had tried to get business away from the Union Pacific prior to the purchase. After the purchase of the road practically all of the agencies of the two roads with the exception of those in New York had been consolidated. Asked what petition he said that it had eliminated it. A point brought out in Mr. Hawley's testirate for such points because its route board, and there had been sharp competition with the Union Pacific also in the Pittsburg and Cincinnati territory, though from these points the rates were Another point brought out by the Government from Mr. Hawley was the recognition by the old transcontinental pool of the Union Pacific as a transcontinental route, even eliminating the Central pool of the Union Pacific as a transcontinental route, even eliminating the Central Pacific link between Ogden and the Coast, which belonged to the Southern Pacific and which the Harriman side contends put the two roads in the class of connecting and not competing parallel lines. Mr. Hawley practically admitted that in dividing up the transcontinental traffic the pool allowed a percentage to the Union Pacific's line by way of Ogden and Portland. In reply to the questions of Judge Lovett, one of the Harriman lawyers, however, Mr. Hawley described the line via Portland as "impracticable" and said that the Union Pacific could not profitably use it as a competing line. Judge Lovett got him to admit that since the Central Pacific link belonged to the Southern Pacific the Union Pacific could not make a rate to California without the consent of the Southern Pacific.

Frank B. Messick of the Rock Island, E. L. Allen of the New York Central, and Charles W. Throckmorton, formerly of the Southern Pacific—all freight agents—testified that there was still a general scramble for business between the roads here in New York. ### Now Offers Evidence That Rice's Valet, Jones, Will Retract.

John T. Milliken, brother-in-law of Albert T. Patrick, who is now serving Low Instep a life sentence in Sing Sing for the murder to ball in the police station by Magistrate of William M. Rice, visited District Attorney Jerome on Monday to lay before him evidence that Charles F. Jones, the valet whose testimony helped to convict Patrick, was ready to deny his previous testimony. Jones, Milliken said, is now in Texas.

Mr. Jerome told Mr. Milliken that the authorities would give no consideration to Patrick until he was ready to waive his rights and allow Magistrate Frederick B. House to tell of the interview which the Magistrate, then counsel for Jones and Patrick, had with them in the counsel room of the Tombs prior to the trial. Jones at the trial testified that at that interview he had told House that he, Jones, had killed Rice at the instigation of Patrick. Since then repeated efforts have been made to have Patrick waive his privilege and allow Magistrate House to tell exactly what did happen at the interview.
